UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN
SOUTHERN DIVISION

---

THOMAS KELLEY,

Plaintiff,

Case No. 1:07-cv-935

v.

Honorable Robert Holmes Bell

ENID LIVINGSTON,

Defendant.

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

This is a civil rights action brought by a state prisoner pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983. The Court has granted Plaintiff leave to proceed in forma pauperis. Under the Prison Litigation Reform Act, PUB. L. NO. 104-134, 110 STAT. 1321 (1996), the Court is required to dismiss any prisoner action brought under federal law if the complaint is frivolous, malicious, fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, or seeks monetary relief from a defendant immune from such relief. 28 U.S.C. §§ 1915(e)(2), 1915A; 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(c). The Court must read Plaintiff's pro se complaint indulgently, see Haines v. Kerner, 404 U.S. 519, 520 (1972), and accept Plaintiff's allegations as true, unless they are clearly irrational or wholly incredible. Denton v. Hernandez, 504 U.S. 25, 33 (1992). Applying these standards, I recommend that Plaintiff's complaint be dismissed for failure to state a claim.

Discussion

I. Factual allegations

Plaintiff is incarcerated in the Parnall Correctional Facility. He is serving sentences for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol or drugs, assault with intent to commit great bodily harm less than murder, possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony and being a felon in possession of a firearm. Plaintiff's action concerns the denial of his parole by the Michigan Parole Board. He sues Parole Board Member Enid Livingston.

On February 13, 2007, Plaintiff received a Notice of Intent to Conduct a Parole Board Interview (NOI). The NOI listed issues that the parole board would consider in deciding whether to grant Plaintiff parole and his rights at the parole board hearing. Defendant Livingston interviewed Plaintiff on March 7, 2007. Plaintiff claims that Livingston's demeanor during the hearing was confrontational and unprofessional. He alleges that Livingston violated his due process rights by denying him a meaningful opportunity to respond to inaccurate information being considered by the parole board. On April 13, 2007, the parole board issued a Notice of Decision denying Plaintiff's parole. The notice was signed by Defendant Livingston and Parole Board Member James Quinlan. The parole board provided the following reasons in support of its decision:

Crime & Criminal Behavior

The assaultive crime:

- Victimized a stranger
- Was substance abuse related
- Involved a dangerous weapon(s)
- Shows a reckless disregard for life
- Resulted in injury
- Had multiple victims

The property crime:

Involved the presence of a weapon(s)

The drug law violation:

Shows a long term habitual addiction

Involved OUIL/OUID

The prisoner has a criminal history:

Which reflects a long term habitual addiction

Personal History

The prisoner has a history of substance abuse which:

Is of a polysubstance nature

The prisoner's social history indicates:

Unstable social or family history

(4/13/07 Parole Board Notice of Decision, Appendix 2, docket #1)).

Plaintiff claims that the NOI did not indicate that his past history of substance abuse would be considered in denying his parole, which violated of his due process rights. He further claims that his due process rights were violated when the parole board did not provide a “substantial and compelling” reason for denying his parole. The parole board may depart from the guidelines by denying parole to a prisoner who scores under the guidelines as having a high probability of parole, but any such departure “shall be for a substantial and compelling reason stated in writing.” See MICH. COMP. LAWS § 791.233(e)(6). According to Plaintiff, he initially scored as having an average probability of parole, which does not require the parole board to provide a substantial and compelling reason for denying parole. However, that the day after his parole interview, the Michigan Department of Corrections allegedly recalculated the parole guidelines and Plaintiff scored as having a high probability of parole. For relief, Plaintiff seeks a new parole board hearing and punitive damages in excess of $10,000.

II. Failure to state a claim

A complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted when it is clear that no relief could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the allegations of the complaint. Jones v. City of Carlisle, 3 F.3d 945, 947 (6th Cir. 1993). To state a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, a plaintiff must allege the violation of a right secured by the federal Constitution or laws and must show that the deprivation was committed by a person acting under color of state law. West v. Atkins, 487 U.S. 42, 48 (1988); Street v. Corr. Corp. of Am., 102 F.3d 810, 814 (6th Cir. 1996). Because § 1983 is a method for vindicating federal rights, not a source of substantive rights itself, the first step in an action under § 1983 is to identify the specific constitutional right allegedly infringed. Albright v. Oliver, 510 U.S. 266, 271 (1994).

A challenge to the fact or duration of confinement should be brought as a petition for habeas corpus and is not the proper subject of a civil rights action brought pursuant to § 1983. See Preiser v. Rodriguez, 411 U.S. 475, 484, 494 (1973) (the essence of habeas corpus is an attack by a person in custody upon the legality of that custody and the traditional function of the writ is to secure release from illegal custody). The Supreme Court has held that a state prisoner cannot make a cognizable claim under § 1983 for an alleged unconstitutional conviction or for “harm caused by actions whose unlawfulness would render a conviction or sentence invalid” unless a prisoner shows that the conviction or sentence has been “reversed on direct appeal, expunged by executive order, declared invalid by a state tribunal authorized to make such determination, or called into question by a federal court’s issuance of a writ of habeas corpus . . . .” Heck v. Humphrey, 512 U.S. 477, 486-87 (1994); see also Edwards v. Balisok, 520 U.S. 641, 646-48 (1997). However, in Wilkinson v. Dotson, 544 U.S. 74, 82 (2005), the Supreme Court clarified that §1983 remains available to a state prisoner for procedural challenges where success in the action would not necessarily spell immediate or speedier release for the prisoner. See also Thomas v. Eby, 481 F.3d 434, 439-40 (6th Cir. 2007) (a plaintiff's challenge to parole procedures may proceed under § 1983 because it does not automatically imply a shorter sentence). Plaintiff does not directly seek release from prison; rather, he seeks a new parole hearing and monetary damages. Because success in this action would not necessarily demonstrate the invalidity of Plaintiff's continued confinement, his action does not appear to be Heck-barred. See Wilkinson, 544 U.S. at 82. Assuming that Plaintiff's action is cognizable under § 1983, it fails to state a claim as set forth herein.

Plaintiff claims that Defendant Livingston<sup>1</sup> violated his due process rights in the parole proceedings. "Without a protected liberty or property interest, there can be no federal procedural due process claim." Experimental Holdings, Inc. v. Farris, ___ F.3d ___, 2007 WL 2768384, at *4 (6th Cir. 2007) (citing Bd. of Regents of State Colleges v. Roth, 408 U.S. 564, 579 (1972)). There is no constitutional or inherent right to be conditionally released before the expiration of a prison sentence. Greenholtz v. Inmates of Neb. Penal & Corr. Complex, 442 U.S. 1, 7 (1979). Although a state may establish a parole system, it has no duty to do so, and thus, the presence of a parole system by itself does not give rise to a constitutionally-protected liberty interest in parole release. Id.; Bd. of Pardons v. Allen, 482 U.S. 369, 373 (1987). Rather, a liberty interest is present <sup>1</sup>Members of a parole board have absolute immunity from damages liability for actions taken in the performance of their duties regarding the decision to grant or deny parole, because that task is functionally comparable to that of a judge. Hawkins v. Morse, No. 98-2062, 1999 WL 1023780, at *1 (6th Cir. Nov. 4, 1999); Tillman v. Price, No. 96-2032, 1997 WL 225993, at *1 (6th Cir. May 5, 1997); Ward v. Moss, No. 94-1417, 1994 WL 664948, at *1 (6th Cir. Nov. 23, 1994); accord Scotto v. Almenas, 143 F.3d 105, 110 (2d Cir. 1998); Wilson v. Kelkhoff, 86 F.3d 1438, 1444 (7th Cir. 1996); Anton v. Getty, 78 F.3d 393, 396 (8th Cir. 1996); Little v. Bd. of Pardons, and Parole Div., 68 F.3d 122, 123 (5th Cir. 1995) (per curiam); Russ v. Uppah, 972 F.2d 300, 303 (10th Cir. 1992). The actions for which plaintiff complains were taken by Defendant Livingston in her quasi-judicial function of deciding whether to grant or deny plaintiff's parole; therefore, she is immune from Plaintiff's claims for monetary damages.

only if state law entitles an inmate to release on parole. Inmates of Orient Corr. Inst. v. Ohio State Adult Parole Auth., 929 F.2d 233, 235 (6th Cir. 1991).

In Sweeton v. Brown, 27 F.3d 1162, 1164-65 (6th Cir. 1994) (en banc), the Sixth Circuit, noting “the broad powers of the Michigan authorities to deny parole,” has held that the Michigan system does not create a liberty interest in parole. Subsequent to its 1994 decision, the Sixth Circuit has recognized the continuing validity of Sweeton and has continued to find that Michigan’s parole scheme creates no liberty interest in being released on parole. See Ward v. Stegall, 93 F. App’x 805, 806 (6th Cir. 2004); Martin v. Ohio Adult Parole Auth., 83 F. App’x 114, 155 (6th Cir. 2003); Bullock v. McGinnis, 5 F. App’x 340, 342 (6th Cir. 2001); Turnboe v. Stegall, No. 00-1182, 2000 WL 1679478, at *1 (6th Cir. Nov. 1, 2000); Hawkins v. Abramajtys, No. 99-1995, 2000 WL 1434695, at *2 (6th Cir. Sept. 19, 2000); Irvin v. Mich. Parole Bd., No. 99-1817, 2000 WL 800029, at *2 (6th Cir. June 14, 2000); Clifton v. Gach, No. 98-2239, 1999 WL 1253069, at *1 (6th Cir. Dec. 17, 1999).

Also, in unpublished decisions, the Sixth Circuit has held that particular parts of Michigan’s statutory parole scheme do not create a liberty interest in parole. See Fifer v. Mich. Dep’t of Corr., No. 96-2322, 1997 WL 681518, at *1 (6th Cir. Oct. 30, 1997); Moran v. McGinnis, No. 95-1330, 1996 WL 304344, at *2 (6th Cir. June 5, 1996); Leaphart v. Gach, No. 95-1639, 1995 WL 734480, at *2 (6th Cir. Dec. 11, 1995); Vertin v. Gabry, No. 94-2267, 1995 WL 613692, at *1 (6th Cir. Oct. 18, 1995); Neff v. Johnson, No. 92-1818, 1993 WL 11880, at *1 (6th Cir. Jan. 21, 1993); Janiske v. Mich. Dep’t of Corr., No. 91-1103, 1991 WL 76181, at *1 (6th Cir. May 9, 1991); Haynes v. Hudson, No. 89-2006, 1990 WL 41025, at *1 (6th Cir. Apr. 10, 1990). In Carnes v. Engler, No. 03-1212, 2003 WL 22177118 (6th Cir. Sept. 19, 2003), the plaintiff argued that the Michigan parole scheme created a liberty interest in parole because it places severe restrictions on the board's discretion to grant or deny parole, and because it requires the board to provide "substantial and compelling reasons" for departing from the parole guidelines. The Sixth Circuit rejected the plaintiff's arguments, holding that "the ultimate authority to grant parole still lies with the discretion of the parole board." 2003 WL 22177118, at *1. Finally, the Michigan Supreme Court has recognized that there is no liberty interest in parole under the Michigan system. Glover v. Mich. Parole Bd., 596 N.W.2d 598, 603-04 (Mich. 1999). Plaintiff has no liberty interest in the parole proceedings; therefore, he fails to state a claim for a violation of his procedural due process rights.

Recommended Disposition

Having conducted the review now required by the Prison Litigation Reform Act, I recommend that Plaintiff's complaint be dismissed for failure to state a claim pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1915(e)(2) and 1915A(b), and 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(c). Should this report and recommendation be adopted, the dismissal of this action will count as a strike for purposes of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g).

I further recommend that the Court find no good-faith basis for appeal within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(a)(3). See McGore v. Wrigglesworth, 114 F.3d 601, 611 (6th Cir. 1997).
